“ I became acquainted with Phyllis through the Big Stone Gap Presbyterian Church. We worked together on the Community Luncheon. Phyllis was a good worker and was active in church until her health began to fail. Until that time she walked all over town. I was also very interested that she was an artist for the WPA while in Cleveland, OH. She had an eye for beautiful expressions of art, even if it was a valentine box that might be given to her. I am thankful to God that I was able to express my appreciation for her in her last few days. I am also grateful for her friendship with Nagels and Aichels. It meant the world to her. May her gentle soul rest in God's arms. With our love...Marilyn and Gary Bumgarner

“ I went to church with Phyllis for many years, and I remember her as a faithful church attendee and a very nice and mild-mannered person. Phyllis used to work at the Salvation Army store in town, and my mom talked about seeing her when she went in there. My mom, Edna Moore, considered Phyllis one of her friends. My parents and I would often give Phyllis a ride to church and back. Phyllis was so faithful that she walked to church when she couldn't get a ride. You could count on her being in church every Sunday. After my mom passed away in 1997, my dad and I continued to give Phyllis as ride to church often. Shortly afterward, I began teaching the adult Sunday school class, and Phyllis was the one person I could always count on to come to Sunday school. I remember when Phyllis was admitted to Heritage Hall. I went to visit her there. I will always remember Phyllis as a faithful, humble person who always had a kind word to say and who was a friend to everyone.
